A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK.

A railway train was speed ing across the State of Illinois one summer day about dark. .$1 00 The coach windows were up a passenger looked out, and behold! a great white light appeared in the sky. He called the attention of the other passengers to it, and while they gazed on the unusual phenomenon a red light came from the white one, then a blue light from the red, and mysterious message from the the fact that she wag knocked skies. Did it tell of some mighty event that would take place and change the map of the world? Did it herald to waiting millions that the end of the strength of the

He said he knew a woman who had been given up as incurable by the dectors, and one of her lungs the dectors, and one of her lungs being almost gone, who, by taking deep breaths every morning, under the required conditions, was aboot lutely a well woman at the end of three months, and could walk seven miles easily.

Broathing is the first element of life, and the more oxygen you can store up in your system the better for your health, he said. Usey your brain power, usey our muscular power, and assist nature to fill the cells with oxygen. We use only about one-quarter of the cells in our lungs, or at the most one-third; the rest become clogged, dyspepsia and indigestion set in, and diaster follows. Man in his primitive state was the healthlest of animals, but with civilization he lost the incentive to inhale the fresh, pure air, and with his desire for rest came inaction, the muscles became stiff and clogged with fatty accumulations for twant of exercise.
